WHAT IS DRM?

Disability Rights Maine (DRM) is Maine's Protection & Advocacy agency for people with disabilities. This means we represent people whose rights have been violated or who have been discriminated against based on their disability. We also provide training on rights and self-advocacy and we advocate for public policy reform.

DRM believes that people with disabilities must:

- Be treated with respect and be free from abuse;
- Control the decisions that affect their lives;
- Receive the services and supports necessary to live independently;
- Have the opportunity to work and contribute to society;
- Have equal access to the same opportunities afforded all other members of society; and
- Fully participate in all aspects of society: education, work and community.

WHO DOES DRM ADVOCATE FOR?

DRM represents individuals who:

- Meet the eligibility criteria for one of our programs;
- Have an issue that falls within our program priorities;
- Are seeking assistance with a problem that relates to their disability; and
- Have an issue that has merit and that can be addressed through legal advocacy.

DRM also makes case decisions based on the availability of agency resources.

For more information about eligibility criteria and individual program priorities, please visit our website or call our office.
